| Developing Cultural Capital            | Exploring Conflict: The Kite Runner places Hosseini's novel at the heart of students' creative writing and language analysis. Through exploring the theme of conflict, students revisit overarching course themes, including relationships, power, memories, identity, power, gender and parent-child relationships, as well as developing their knowledge of ethnicity, religion, cultural traditions, war and morality.A Streetcar Named Desire is a text which explores a number of pertinent themes within English Literature, as well as placing discourse at the forefront of students' analysis as they explore dramatic speech in a literary context. Considered an American modern classic, the text explores the importance of social class and changing social attitudes. It also examines closely the role of women in society, and the effects of trauma on mental state. | Making Connections requires students to make active connections between a literary text and some non-literary material. The connections must be based either on a chosen theme or on the idea that particular linguistic strategies and features may occur in the different types of material. The nature of this sequence is synoptic, as students draw on the skills that they have developed in their study of the Paris Anthology, The Handmaid's Tale and selected poems by Seamus Heaney. However, students are able to pursue their own literary and linguistic interests by choosing a literary text and non-literary material to explore.  | Telling Stories explores the role that storytelling has in shaping representations of remembered places, imagined worlds, and times, places, people and events. In addition, students explore overarching course themes, including relationships, power, memories, identity, gender and parent-child relationships.While all three core texts focus on the notion of storytelling, the Paris Anthology offers an opportunity for students to explore connections between different texts and to consider the importance of contextual factors, such as mode and genre conventions, have in contributing towards differences and similarities.Meanwhile, The Handmaid's Tale and selected poems by Seamus Heaney offer an opportunity to explore the role of narrative / poetic voices in shaping our understanding as readers. In addition, this is particularly pertinent within The Handmaid's Tale , as students consider the significance of the narrative voice in relation to the fantasy world of Gilead. | Telling Stories explores the role that storytelling has in shaping representations of remembered places, imagined worlds, and times, places, people and events.
